THE DIFFERENCE.

MAN.

"If he wears a good coat,
Lift him up; lift him up;
Though he be but a bloat,
Lift him up.
If he has not common sense;
And can boast a few pence,
Lift him up.

If his face shows no shame,
Lift him up, lift him up;
Though crime is on his name,
Lift him up.
Though their disgrace be his sport,
Let your daughters him court—
Lift him up.

Though he brings some disgrace,
Lift him up, lift him up;
And brings the blush to your face,
Lift him up;
Society him needs—
Never mind his black deeds—
Lift him up."

WOMAN.

"If woman once errs,
Kick her down, kick her down;
If misfortune is hers,
Kick her down;
Though her tears fall like rain,
And she ne'er smiles again,
Kick her down,

If a man breaks her heart,
Kick her down, kick her down;
Redouble the smart—
Kick her down;
And if in low condition,
On, on to perdition,
Kick her down."

THE PIN HOLE.

Among the many traditions held in reverence by the descendants of Lady Mary Chobham, there is one of peculiar interest. The afternoon of an unrivalled summer day was verging towards evening, long shadows were cast upon the turf; a gentle breeze stirred the thousand leaves overhead and rippeld the surface of the river Wear, which ponded back, formed the really magnificent sheet of water that constituted one of the chief ornaments of Wearscote, the ancestral domain of the Chobham family.

A pleasure boat, into which the dripping oars had only recently been drawn, rocked on the bosom of the lake, and on a rustic seat on the margin sat two young people, who had been loitering away the whole day in a state of entire felicity. The Lady Mary was at that time not more than fifteen and rather childish in appearance, with long fair hair flowing in infantine carelessness and grace, clear, delicate complexion, large eyes that sought the ground; the whole contour hardly giving promise of that exquisite loveliness which in after days shone unrivalled in the court of George III. Her dress was that of a child—a simple white frock, with a broad blue crape sash; a comfortable German bonnet, with its deep tippet, or cape.

The young girl was a little thrown back on the seat, and whilst her companion held her left hand, the right was busily engaged in forcing the gold pin that had fastened her sash in and out of the hard oak arm of the park chair. This she did in a sort of unconscious manner, though every now and then the blood would rush into her cheeks, and her efforts became almost spasmodic. With infinite difficulty at such times, a spec of wood might be forced out, almost big enough for the cricket-ball of a mite. Perseverance, however, did much, and the pin hole attained more and more of of a respectable depth and shape. The young man by the Lady Mary's side, was in reality not much older than herself, but the hardships of a sea-faring life, the constant change of climate, and the real service he had already seen, gave him an appearance of age and manliness. He had entered the navy at thirteen, and was now enjoying a short leave of absence. Dressed in the stiff uniform of the service, Arthur Townsend had no adventitious advantages, but if you looked in his face, its high resolution and great mental power shadowed out the future companion of Nelson and Collingwood. You might almost have read his part in Trafalgar. And now he was warming with the subject most interesting to him; and that voice of singular sweetness, destined 'to shout amid the shouting crowd,' was telling to earnestly attentive ears of moonlight watches on the tideless waters of the Mediterraenean; of stormy conflicts in the Bay of Biscay; ay, and of the cannon's roar—of conflict and death and victory. The Lady Mary, with head reclined, and the little hand working diligently with the gold pin, listened with breath almost suspened to the account of the gallant and successful defence of Gibralter; she seemed to see the red hot balls as they fell on the enemy's ships and batteries; and the flush on her cheek came and went more rapidly as the narrator described the daring deeds, the moments of peril, as the victors braved everything to the rescue of their baffled foe, maddening and perishing in their burning ship, no longer considered as enemies, but as suffering fellow creatures; and her heart swelled within her as she instinctively recognized, felt, through the little that was indicated, how large a share the narrator had in these events. And then Arthur Townsend described other scenes,—coral islets formed under sunny skies,—where the flamingo was wading in the still lagoon, and the palm tree saw its feather top reflected—like a still evening after a stormy day; and the cheek grew clear and pale, and the wonder working little hand rested; but in these communings there was no talk of self.

Night had crept around, and finally closed over Wearscote, the morning hours were even approaching, but still Lady Chobham meditated in her library. Living in courts, the intimate friend of politicians, acute and far seeing in all things, the aspect of public affairs filled her with anxiety. There were discontent and disunion at home—abroad the nations were still staggering under the effects of the French Revolution; the course of Bonaparte was beginning. Nor was she insensible to the dangers attending the career her young kinsman had so well begun.—On the morrow he would depart. Then, how should she see her sister's son again? Now she considered the children were at rest—hours had passed since their bright, unthinking good night. She was roused by a most unmistakable step—one acquired only by those whose walk is over unsteady waters; and young Townsend entered. There was neither hurry nor anxiety in his manner, and the strong will suppressed all emotion. Quietly, respectfully, he told his aunt that he loved the Lady Mary, and that he intended to marry her. There was great feeling, there was earnest purpose, there was nothing ridiculous in the boy lover. He rather expressed conviction of what would be, than asked sanction or assistance.

Lady Chobham was, to say the least, greatly puzzled—she thought the proposition absurd, its probabilities small. The youth was entering upon a life of difficulty and danger—years might elapse before he would see his native land again; and then would he be a match for her child? Rank, fortune were alike inadequate.—The mother's eye foresaw the splendor of womanhood into which the young girl would develop; she did not underrate her great advantages of wealth and connection, and here was a sailor boy almost claiming her. She looked up,—in the calm clear eye, the self-reliant ample brow, the hero stood revealed—she doubted not his future or his destiny. He might die; but living or dying, every one connected with him would be ennobled. The fulfilment of his hope was unlikely, but she would not see her sister's child turn away in sorrow.

'Arthur' she said, and eye and lip quivered—'my child is happy in your love; hereafter you will understand more of her worth, her position and its requirements. You must entirely deserve her—until you do, do not attempt to win her. I have but one word of stipulation—no word of what has passed between us must disturb her peace, until you can become her husband.' Strange word to a boy of sixteen, stranger still that it did not seem incongruous; and he accepted the terms. Long before the rest of the world was stirring, he again visited the seat by the river head, and made prize of a small portion of a blue crape sash that had been left waving in the breeze; and by sunrise he had joined his ship at Portsmouth.

Lady Mary returned to school. It was observed that for some time she paid marked attention to her geographical studies—and walking her measured pace round the dull London squares, her thoughts were often on the broad Pacific, or coasting the Mediterranean. Time passed on, and these things faded. With a delicate refinement she stood the acknowledged beauty of the day. But she lived in stirring times, and hers was no spirit that could live for itself alone. In all the daily occuring public events, she took an absorbing interest. Suitors came and went; she never seemed to have any but kind and gracious words of refusal to give them. She could not account for it herself.—From time to time she read with interest, but without emotion, the glowing descriptions of Arthur Townsend's prowess and rewards. She saw his name coupled with all that her country valued and honored, and she felt glad and proud that she was related to him. Twice he returned, and they had met with pleasure and unreserve on her part; but they had never been at Wearscote together again. And still more years passed, and with them came sorrow; her mother did not live to see the end of the romance.—And now even that trial was over, and Lady Mary was in the possession of great wealth, every personal charm in full perfection, but still wandering, fancy free, by the side of the river at Wearscote.

And again it is a summer evening, and again the Lady Mary is sitting on the chair by the side of the lake, and again, earnestly, respectfully, by no mean cavalier, is a suit she has often heard before, urged on her. The affections of the Lady Mary are disengaged; she almost fears it is selfish to be so indifferent; ought she not to give some encouragement, some hope?—She wavers in her refusal, assuming the same attitude in which she had listened to another voice years before. Her eye rests on a small speck in the arm of the chair; a crust of paint had been recently rubbed off; and with a sudden rush and bound backwards, memory takes in the whole scene when that small hole was nervously bored. All, the very words then uttered, come back, and with them a feeling that she dare not accept or encourage any offered love.

True to his promise and to himself, Arthur Townsend returned. His country paid, in wealth and honors, part of the debt of gratitude she owed him. He met the Lady Mary on equal terms; how he sped in his wooing, is a matter of history. In an old cabinet, a small piece of oak, delicately perforated, and wrapped in a portion of blue crape, was found, and then this imperfectly told little story came out.

A Tale of the Revolution.

Sergeant Jasper.—At the commencement of the revoutionary war, Sergeant Jasper enlisted in the second South Carolina regiment of infantry, commanded by Colonel Moultrie. He distinguished himself in a peculiar manner at the attack which was made upon Fort Moultrie, on Sullivan's Island, the 27th of June, 1776. In the warmest part of the contest, the flag-staff was severed by a cannon ball, and the flag fell to the bottom of the ditch on the outside of the works. This accident was considered by the anxious inhabitants of Charleston as putting an end to the contest, by striking the American flag to the enemy. The moment that Jasper made the discovery that the flag had fallen, he jumped from one of the embrasures, and mounted the colors, which he tied to a sponge-staff, and replanted on the parapet, where he supported them until another flag-staff was procured. The subsequent activity and enterprise of this patriot, induced Col. Moultrie to give him a sort of roving commission, to go and come at pleasure, confident that he was always usefully employed. He was privileged to select such men from the regiment as he should choose, to accompany him in his enterprises. His parties consisted generally of five or six, and he often returned with prisoners before Moultire was apprised of his absence. Jasper was distinguished for his humane treatment when an enemy fell into his power. His ambition appears to have been limited to the characteristics of bravery, humanity and usefulness to the cause in which he was engaged. When it was in his power to kill, but not capture, it was his practice to permit a single prisoner to escape. By his sagacity and enterprise he often succeeded in the capture of those who were lying in ambush for him.

In one of these excurtions, an instance of bravery and humanity is recorded by the biographer of General Marion, which would stagger credulity, if it was not well attested. While he was examining the British camp at Ebenezer all the sympathy of his great heart was awakened by the distresses of a Mrs. Jones, whose husband an American by berth, had taken the kings protection, and been confined in irons for deserting the royal cause after he had taken the oath of allegiance. Her well founded belief was that nothing short of the life of her husband would atone for the offence with which he was charged. Anticipation of the awful scene of a beloved husband expiring upon a gibbet, had excited in her inexpressible emotions of grief and destraction.

Jasper secretly consulted with his companion Sergeant Newton, whose feelings for the distressed female and her child were equally excited with his own, upon the practicability of releasing Jones from his impending fate. Though they were unable to suggest a plan of operation they were determined to watch for the most favorable opportunity, and make the effort.—The departure of Jones and several others (all in irons) to Savannah, for trial, under a guard consisting of a sergeant, a corporal and eight men, was ordered upon the succeeding morning. Within two miles from Savannah, about thirty yards from the main road, is a spring of fine water, surrounded by a deep and thick underwood, where travellers often halt to refresh themselves with a cool draught from the pure fountair. Jasper and his companion considered this the most favorable spot for their enterprise. They accordingly passed the guard, and concealed themselves near the spring. When the enemy came up, they halted, and only two of the guard remained with the prisoners, while the others leaned their guns against trees in a careless manner, and went to the spring. Jasper and Newton seized two muskets, and disabled the two sentinels. The possession of all the arms placed the enemy in their power, and compelled them to surrender. The irons were taken off, and arms put in the hands of those who had been prisoners, and the whole party arrived at Perrysburg the next morning, and joined the American camp.

There are few instances upon record where personal exertions, even for self-preservation from certain prospects of death, would have induced resort to an act so desperate of execution. How much more laudable was this where the spring to action was roused by the lamentations of a female unknown to the adventurers!

Subsequent to the gallant defence at Sullivan's Island, Col. Moultrie's regiment was presented with a stand of colors by Mrs. Elliot, which she had richly embroidered with her own hands, and as a reward for Jasper's particular merit, Gov. Ruttledge presented him with a very handsome sword. During the assult against Savannah, two officers had been killed, and one wounded, endeavoring to plant these colors upon the enemy's parapet upon the spring hill redoubt. Just before the retreat was ordered, Jasper endeavored to replace them upon the works, and while he was in the act received a mortal wound, and fell into the ditch. When a retreat was ordered, he recollected the honorable conditions upon which the donor presented the colors to his regiment, and among the last acts of his life succeeded in bringing them off. Major Horry called to see him soon after the retreat, to whom, it is said, he made the following communication:

"I have got my furlough. That sword was presented to me by Gov. Rutledge, for my services in the defence of Fort Moultire. Give it to my father, and tell him I have won it in honor. If the old man should weep, tell him his son died in the hopes of a better life. Tell Mrs. Elliot that I lost my life supporting the colors which she presented to our regiment.—Should you ever see Jones, his wife and son, tell them that Jasper is gone, but that the remembrance of the battle which he fought for them, brought a secret joy to his heart when death was about to stop its motion forever.

He expired shortly after closing this sentence.

Young Girls at Boarding School.—The Story of Laura Maitland, lately published in The Organ, contain some valuable lessons to girls in Boarding Schools, which we trust will do good. Many of our young readers are in schools, away from home and home influence and they will find the lessons we refer to by recurring to the story.

It sometimes happens in such schools that some one pupil of strong character, but evil disposition, acquires an undue influence over the others, and secretly and silently warps them from their natural simplicity and sincerity of character, thus in a few months weakning or destroying good principles and dispositions, which the parents had spent years in nurturing and sometimes when these children return to their parents, it is only to fill them with surprise and sadness at the rapid growth of evil which has taken place in their children's hearts. Young people instead of complaining when their teacher exercise a vigilent supervision over their companionships, should be highly grateful for otherwise seeds of evil might be sown in their hearts which in after life would cost them bitter tears of shame and sorrow. Young girls be thankful if your parents have been fortunate enough to secure for you the care of a wise, careful, vigilant teacher, one who is anxious to secure you from evil influences, as well as advance you in useful learning. *N. Bushmen. Rev. Dr. Adam Smith, of Cape Town, Africa, gave an interesting address last Sabbath evening in the Old South Chapel, on the people of Africa, and the state of society in that part of the world. Dr. Smith is a missionary of the church of Scotland, and has been in his field of labor for more than a quarter of a century. The three great races in that portion of Africa to which his labors have been directed, are the Bushmen, the Chipoos, and the Tuloos. He describes the Bushmen as the lowest form of manhood,—in height about four feet and eight inches—having no habitations—dwelling in the clefts of the rocks, or sleeping among the branches of the trees, hence their name, Bushmen, degraded, but cunning—boldly attacking the lion with their bows about the size of those used by children as toys, but made deadly by the poison extracted from the most poisonous serpents, whom they catch by hasping them by the neck—eating everything they kill from snakes to cattle—using the grubs of the ants of Africa, which they dry and carry with them as food, and which is known as "Bushmen's rice,"—dressing themselves in sheepskins—being firm believers in witchcraft—having no idea of God—and having no word in their language by which spiritual things or beings can be expressed. They thus are the pigmies of the world, and present the lowest form of human life.

Over-Doing It.

A well known Methodist minister, who was travelling on horseback through the State of Massachusetts, stopped one noon on a sultry summmer's day at a cottage by the roadside, and requested some refreshment for himself and beast. This was readily granted by the worthy New England dame, so the parson dismounted, and having seen his horse well cared for entered the cottage and partook of the refreshment which was cheerfully placed before him. For some time past there had been no rain, and the country round seemed literally parched up. The minister entered into conversation with the old lady and remarked about the dryness of the season. 'Yes,' she replied, 'unless we have rain soon, all my beets, cabbages and cucumbers will be good for nothing, and I think all ministers oughs to pray for rain.' The worthy divine informed her that he was a minister, and that he should be happy to comply with her wish.—He accordingly knelt down and prayed fervently that the gates of Heaven might be opened, that showers might descend and refresh the earth. He then arose from his knees, and having kindly thanked his hostess, bade her good day, mounted his horse and departed. But he had not been gone more than an hour when the clouds began to gather, and a tremendous shower of hail and rain descended, and with such force as to wash the contents of the old lady's garden clear out of the ground. 'There!' said she, 'that is always the way with those tarnal Methodists, they never undertake to do anything but they always over do it.'

All the gold in the world might, if melted into ingots, be contained in a cellar twenty-feet square and sixteen feet high. All our boasted wealth already obtained from California and Australia would go into an iron safe nine feet square and nine feet high.

Your Change, Sir.

One of those nondescript specimens of humanity called dandies, travelling in Connecticut, a few days since, in his own or in a borrowed conveyence was brought up with a 'round turn,' at a toll-gate, which he designed to have passed without paying the usual fee. When he found himself in limbo, from which he could not escape without 'forking over,' he inquired of a young lady who was in attendance at the gate, how much he had to pay before he could pass the formidable barrier.

'Three cents, sir, for single wagons,' replied the young lady.

'Three cents is a threepence, the half of a sixpence, one of the smallest bits of silver in use, eh, young woman—am I righ?' said the dandy, feeling in his pocket for the thange.

'Three cents, sir, if you please,' said the lady.

'Well, young woman you seem to be highway*man* here—so take my money, and shovel out the change as quick as you can trot for it,' said the dandy, at the same time purposely dropping a shilling piece into the mud beneath his wagon. 'Ah! there it is in the mud, I declare—I wouldn't dirty my fingers for twenty of them.'

The young lady took the shilling from the mud where he had dropped it, went into the house and returned with nine cents, which she placed immediately under the wheel, where she had taken up the shilling.

'Hillo, hillo, young woman, what is it you mean!' said the dandy. 'Why don't you put that coin into my hand, eh!'

The girl archly replied:

'Sir, I found the money under the wagon;—there you'll find your change, and as she turned into the house, she gave the fellow a most significant smile, and added: 'I wouldn't dirty my fingers for twenty of them—would you, Mr. Dandy*man*! Ha, ha, ha!—there's your change, sir,' and she closed the door.

The gentleman dismounted—picked up his 'coppers' and was off at full speed, impatient to get out of sight and hearing. If he should ever happen in that county again, he will take care how he makes change with Yankee girls.

Caught in his own Trap.

A Jersey tavern keeper, who had become celebrated more for the length of his bills than the abundance of his table, met with a sharper as sharp as himself on one occasion. A Yankee, happening to pass through that barbarous region stopped at this man's hotel, and ordered dinner. When he came to pay the bill he was astonished to find it stretched out to the round sum of six dollars. This rather starled the Yankee and he demanded to know what he had eaten that such a bill could be charged. The landlord replied 'the bill will show you.' On consulting it, he found charged therein several kinds of wines and extras.

'Well, look here! I didn't have none of your wines—there was none of that 'ere stuff brought on for me, and I won't pay the bill!'

'Oh, we never wait for orders here, we know our business,' replied the landlord; the wine was on the table and you could drink it or not, that was your business, not ours.'

The Yankee saw there was no use in quarreling about the matter, so with a broken heart he paid the pill. Three months after that our eastern friend again made his appearance at the hotel and called for dinner. When he sat down to the table he laid a twenty dollar bill at the side of his plate, and ordered all the delicacies he could think of, and all the wines he could stomach. While eating his dinner, he called the attention of the landlord to the bill, as to whether it was genuine or not. The landlord looked at it, replied that it was, and handed it back. As soon as the Yankee had finished, he put the money in his pocket, walked out of the house, and jumped into his wagon. 'Hello!' said the landlord, 'here, you have not paid your bill!'

'It's your own fault,' said the Yankee, 'I never wait to have a bill presented to me—the money laid on the table, and you could have taken it or not, just as you told me about the wine three months ago yesterday.' The landlord swore a few as the Yankee's horse spattered the mud up the road.

OLIVE OIL.

Having said something last week about the probability of the revival of oil anointing, it will be of some interest to many to know something more about olive oil, than what was contained in the article to which we refer. Olive oil has long been distingused for its excellent qualities, and it has been used from time immemorial, both as an article of diet and of usefulness as applied to many necessary purposes, by the inhabitants of various countries. The olive tree grows wild and in luxurient grandeur in the Holy Land, and its fruit and the oil derived from it were and are used by all the dwellers in Syria and Judea. The olives of the Grecian Isles have long been famous, and a great quantity of oil is exported from that portion of the world every year. Italy is also famous for its olives and its oils. Throughout all the district of La Terra d' Otranta, scarcely anything else is cultivated. The port of Gallipoli in that country from which this oil is exported in great quantities to Germany, France and England, has given it name to the oil, which is known to many only as Gallipoli oil, and not that produced from the olive. The olive trees bear when two years old, but not fully till six years afterwards, when it becomes a source of wealth to its owner. It lives to a great age, three, four and seven hundred years, and bears abundantly during all that time.—There is a celebrated tree in Pescio, in Italy, which is seven hundred years old, and bears two and three hundred weight of oil yearly.

When the fruit is fully ripe, it is gathered mostly by hand and crushed in a mill consisting mostly of a single stone turned in a circular bed. When the pulp is sufficiently crushed it is placed in sacks and heaped on the platform of a press. The pulp is submitted to a very low pressure in the press, and the oil so obtained is beautiful and sweet, and is of the first quality for table use, and known as 'salad oil'. After the fine oil is extracted, there yet remains a considerable quantity mixed with the vegetable albumen. The bags of pulp are therefore lifted up and into each poured a small quantity of boiling water. This causes the pulp to swell—the albumen coagulates, and more fluid oil flows freely. A certain quantity, however, remains in the refuse, which is subject to further treatment, and is used in making soap.

As soon as the first run of fine oil is obtained it is conveyed to skins or reservoirs, for future good keeping. The town of Gallipoli being built on a rocky island, is famous for its caverns, where the oil is placed and where it soon clarifies and can be preserved without becoming viscid.

The oil is kept for seven years in these caverns, without becoming rancid, and when it has to be shipped, it is carried down in skins, run into casks, and sometimes the oil is sent off in the skins. The fine oil called Florence oil, is brought from Leghorn in bottles, and is of the very first quality. Olive oil is employed in making the castile soap, and is also much used in the arts of dyeing Turkey red on cotton, and oiling wool. Owing to the great quantity of oil sold in our country as olive oil, it is our opinion that there is much deception employed by the sellers of it—that much oil is sold for the pure olive oil, which is not olive oil at all. We believe that the olive could be cultivated with profit in our Southern States, and we hope that some of our planters may be induced to enter upon its culture. [Scientific American.

Kiss me, Mamma? Do kiss me!

The child was so sensitive—so like that little shrinking plant that curls at a breath and shuts its heart from the light.

The only beauty she possessed were an exceedingly transparent skin, and mournful blue eyes.

I had been trained by a very stern, strict, conscientious mother, but I was a hardy plant, rebounding after every shock, misfortune could not daunt, though disipline tamed me. I fancied, alas! that I, too, must go through the same routine with this delicate creature; so one day when she had displeased me exceedingly by repeating an offense, I was determined to punish her severely. I was very serious all day, and on sending her to her little couch I said, 'Now, my daughter, to punish you, and show you how very naughty you have been, I shall not kiss you to night.'

She stood looking at me, astonishment personified, with her great mournful eyes wide open. I suppose she had forgotten her misconduct till then; and I left her with the big tears dropping down her cheeks and her lips quivering.

Presently I was sent for—'Oh! mamma, you will kiss me; I can't go to sleep if you don't,' she sobbed, every tone of her voice trembling, and she held out her hands.

Now came the struggle between love and what I falsely termed duty. My heart said, give her the kiss of peace; my stern nature urged me to persist in my correction that I might impress the thought upon her mind. That was the way I had been brought up until I was a most submissive child, and remembered how often I had thanked my mother since.

I knelt by the bedside—'Mother can't kiss you, Ellen,' I whispered, though every word choked me. I blamed myself as the fragile form shook with half suppressed sobs, and saying 'Mother hopes little Ellen will learn to mind her after this,' left the room for the night.

It might have been about twelve when I was awakened by the nurse. Apprehensive, I ran eagerly to the child's chamber. I had a fearful dream.

Ellen did not know me. She was sitting up, crimsoned from the forehead to the throat—her eyes so bright that I almost drew back aghast at their glance. From that night a raging fever drank up her life; and what think you was the incessant plaint poured into my anguished heart.

'Oh! kiss me, mother—do kiss me, I can't go to sleep. You'll kiss your little Ellen, won't you? I can't go to sleep. I won't be naughty if you'll only kiss me. Oh! kiss me, dear mama, I can't go to sleep.'

Holy little child, she did go to sleep one grey morning, and never woke again—never! Her little hand was locked in mine, and all my veins icy with its gradual chill. Faintly the light faded out of her beautiful eyes, whiter and whiter grew the tremulous lips. She never knew me, but with her last breath she whispered, 'I will be good, mother, if you will only kiss me!'

Kiss her! God knows how passionate, but how unavailing, were my kisses upon her cheek after that fatal night. God knows how wild were my prayers that she might know, if but only once, that I kissed her. God knows how I would have yielded up my very life, could I have asked forgiveness of that sweet child.

Well, grief is unavailing now; she lies in her little tomb; there is a marble urn at the head and a rosebush at her feet: there grow sweet summer flowers—there waves the gentle gras,—their birds sing their matins and vespers—there the blue sky smiles down to-day, and there lies the freshness of my heart.

Parents, you should have the pathos in the voice of that stricken mother, as she said, 'There are plants that spring into great vigor if the heavy pressure of a footstep crush them; but, oh! there are others that even the pearls of the light dew bend to the earth!"

YOUNG AMERICA.

When 'Young America' becomes a competitor in any field he is sure to distance the fleetest. Not satisfied with the new and progressive, he must occasionally step aside and try his powers of inflation on old forms. A notable case in point, illustrating both propositions at once, is that of Mr. Charles Astor Bristed, the dashing grandson of John Jacob Astor, who has been running a wild round of fashionable dissipation abroad, after having exhausted all sources of excitement in this country. J. Ross Brown, in his 'Yusef,' thus draws his picture:

'When I first saw him, he was on the way from Florence to Milan, in quest of a pair of pantaloons, of a perticular style. No man in Europe understood cutting except Pantaletti.—There was a set in Pantaletti that made him indispensible. He had tried the Parisian tailors, but they were deficient in the knees. It was his intention to proceed at once from Milan to Leipsic for boots; the Germans were the only people who brought boots to perfection, and decidedly the best were to be had at Leipsic. He expected to be obliged to return to Paris for shirts; there was a set in the collar of the Parisian shirt that suited him. His medicines he always purchased in London; his cigars he was forced to import from Havana; his Latakia tobacco he was compelled to purchase himself in Smyrna, and this was partly the occasion of his present visit. As to wines, it was nonsense to drink any but the pure Johannisburg—which he generally saw bottled on the Rhine every summer, in order to avoid imposition. His winters he spent chiefly in Spain; it was the only country where good cream was to be had; but the coffee was inferior, and he sometimes had to cross the Pyrenees for want of a good cup of coffee. No mode of travelling suited him exactly—in fact, he disliked travelling. Riding he hated, because it jolted him, walking because it tired him, the snow because it was cold, the sun because it was warm, Rome because it was damp, Nice because it was dry, Athens because it was dusty. (By the way I disliked Athens myself, chiefly on that account—Bimby was right there.) But it was impossible for him to live in America again. What could any man of taste do there? No pictures, no ruins, no society, no opera, no classical associations—nothing at all except business, and all sorts of business he despised. It was a ridiculous as well as a vulgar way of spending life. In fact, the only decent people he had met with were the French—a man might contrive to exist a while in Paris. Not that he approved altogether of the French language—it wanted depth and richness—the only language worthy of a man of sense was the Sanscrit. As soon as he had suited himself in boots at Leipsic he was going to perfect himself in Sanscrit at the University at Berlin; after which he hoped to recover from the effects of a hard study by a tour through Bavaria, which was the only country on the face of the earth where the beer was fit to drink.'

Extreme Prudence.

A good many years ago, as we gather from a friend, in a certain pleasant town in this state, a descendant of the ancient Knickerbocker held the position of justice. A case was to be tried before him, and he had as he supposed, given out the proper time; when one Sunday morning as he was 'getting ready' for church, the parties appeared, and, very much to his astonishment, insisted that that was the day he had set. He seemed considerably nonplused at his mistake, but after a moment of profound cogitation, turned to them and said—'Well, shentlemens, I cannot try dis case on der Sabbath; derfore, I adjourns it to one week from next Wednesday—now Hans,' said he, turning suddenly to his son, as the bright idea struck him, 'get der almanac and see if that comes on Sunday.'

Jackson Anecdotes.

One of our exchanges relates the following anecdotes:

We heard an anecdote the other day which we think is good enough to publish. It is as follows: After the battle of New Orleans Lacoste, a warm friend of Gen. Jackson, desired an introduction to Com. Barron, and for that reason he went to Gen. Jackson to get a letter of recommendation or introduction, which the old General cheerfully gave him, in his usual frank manner. Lacoste, however, did not present the letter, and one of his friends, who happened to know of the circumstance, asked him what he did with it. He replied that he had it in his pocket; "and, by gar," says he, 'I would not give the recommendation of old Jacksons to see forty Commodores."

The letter was a very flattering fine one, and to this day is in the possesion of the Lacoste family.

A very similar, but even better story is related of Maj. Davezec, so long the eloquent advocate of the Democracy of New York, and our late Charge to Holland. The incident is literally true and authentic. When Mr. P was elected President and had gone to Wa ington, Gen. Jackson, who was then in feeble health, took a warm interest in the appointment of his old Aid, Maj. Davezac, to the office which he afterwards obtained. Gen. Armstrong Gen. Jackson's intimate friend, being on a visit to Washington, was charged particularly by Gen. Jackson to remind Mr. Polk of the claims of M. D., and of the warm friendship and interest he entertained for him. Gen. Armstrong met the Major at the capital, and was immediately accosted by him with an earnest inquiry after the health of his old commander.

"He is tolerably well," was the reply of Gen Armstrong, "and his last words to me before parting were—"Tell Col. Polk not to forget my old friend, Maj. Davezac."

"Did he say that?" eagerly enquired the gallant veteran, with a flash of pride and a gathering tear of emotion in his bright eye.

"Yes he did," responded Gen. A.

"Then," exclaimed the enthusiastic Creole, "the office may go to the devil! I wouldn't give the pleasure of being so spoken of by such a man for all the offices in the gift of the President of the people, or all the wealth of the world"

"IF MY HUSBAND WERE TO DO SO."

A DOMESTIC INCIDENT.

'Poor woman!' What a thousand pities it is for her!' said Mrs. Grimes with feeling. 'I wonder how she stands it. If my husband were to act so, it would kill me.'

'I could never stand it in the world,' added Mrs. Pitts. 'It's a dreadful situation for a woman to be placed in. Mr. Larklin used to be one of the best of men, and took the best possible care of his family. For years there was not a happier woman in town than his wife. But now it makes one's heart ache to look at her. Oh! it must be one of the most heart-breaking things in the world to have a drunken hurband.'

'Well, all I have to say,' spoke up Mrs. Peters with warmth, 'is that I don't pity her much.'

'Why, Mrs. Peters! How can you talk so!'

'Well I don't! Any woman who will live with a drunken husband, don't deserve pity.—Why don't she leave him!'

'That is easier said than done, Mrs. Peters.'

'I should think it a great deal easier than to live with a drunken brute, and have her life tormented out of her. If my husband were to do so, I reckon him and I would part before twenty-four hours.'

Now Mrs. Peters's husband was a most excellent man, and a sober man, withal. And his wife was tenderly attached to him. In regard to his ever becoming a drunkard, she had as little fear as of his running off and leaving her. Still, when she made her last remark, she looked towards him, for he was present, with a stern and significant expression on her countenance. This was not really meant for him, but the imaginary individual she had supposed as bearing the relation towards her as a drunken husband.

'You would, would you?' Mr. Peters replied, to the warmly expressed resolution uttered by his wife.

'Yes, that I would!' half laughingly and half seriously retorted Mrs. Peters.

'You don't know what you are talking about,' spoke up Mrs. Grimes.

'Indeed, then I do! I consider any woman a fool who will live with a drunken husband.—For my part, I have not a spark of sympathy for wives of drunkards—I mean those who live with the men who beggar and abuse them.—Mere disgusting brutes—the very sight of whom ought to turn a decent woman's stomach.'

'You were never placed in such a situation, and therefore are not competent to judge how far a woman who continues to live with a drunkard is or is not to blame. For my part, I am inclined to think that, in some cases, to live with the husband under these circumstances, is the least of two evils.'

This was said by Mrs. Pitts.

'I think you are right there,' remarked Mr. Peters. 'A woman feels towards her own husband, the father of her children, and the man who in life's spring time won her best affections, very differently to what she does towards another man. She knows all his good qualities, and remembers how tenderly he has loved her, and how he would still, love her, but for the blind infatuation from which he feels it almost impossible to break away. The hope that he will reform never leaves her. When she looks at her children, even though abused and neglected, she cannot but hope that their father will yet be to them a true father. And this hope keeps her up.'

'All nonsense!' Mrs. Peters replied warmly. 'Any woman is a fool to feed herself up with such fancies. There is only one true remedy, and that is separation. That's what I'd do and what every woman of sense ought to do. Don't tell me about the hope of reforming. It's all nonsense. You would not catch me breaking my heart after that fashion for any man. Not I.'

The more Mrs. Grimes, and Mrs. Pitts and others present argued their side of the question the more pertinaciously did she maintain the position she had assumed, until Mr. Peters could not help feeling somewhat vexed, and some little hurt, He being her husband, and the only one who could possibly hold the relation towards her of a drunken husband he must be the man towards whom all her indignation was directed—under the imagined possibility of his becoming a tipler.

After a while the subject dropped, and at the close of the social evening, the friends separated, and went to their own homes.

It was, perhaps, about two months from the period at which this conversation occurred, that Mr. Peters left his home early in the evening, to attend a political meeting—politics at the time running high, and hard cider flowing as freely as water. He was in the habit of attending such meetings, and of partaking of his portion of the cider, and at times of something a little stronger; but as he was a sober man, and a man, too, of strong good sense and firm principles, the thought of his partaking too freely never crossed the mind of his wife.

Regular in his habits, he was rarely out after ten o'clock on any occasion. But this time ten came, and even eleven, but he was still away. This was a circumstance so unusual that his wife could not help feeling a degree of uneasiness.—She went to the door and listened for him after the clock struck eleven, and stood there for some time, expecting every moment to hear the sound of his footsteps in the distance. But she waited in vain and at last re-entered the house with a troubled feeling.

At last twelve o'clock came, and almost at the same time, she heard her husband at the door, endeavoring to open it with the dead-latch key. In this he was not successful from some cause, and thinking that she might have turned the key, Mrs. Peters went quietly and opened the door for him. She found she had not locked it.

As she lifted the latch, the door was thrown suddenly against her and the husband came staggering in. As he passed her, he struck against the wall of the passage—rebounded—struck the other side, and then fell heavily upon the floor.

The dreadful truth instantly flashed upon her. He was drunk. For a moment her heart ceased to beat, her head reeled, and she had to lean against the wall to keep from falling. Then all the tender emotions of her heart rushed freely into activity. It was her own husband who lay there, overcome by the master spirit of strong drink. With almost superhuman strength, she raised him up, although a large man, and supported him with her arm until she got him up stairs, and laid upon a bed. By this time he seemed perfectly stupid; and only mumbled incoherent replies to the frequent and tenderly urged importunities of his wife.

After some time she got him undressed and in bed. But he grew more and more stupid every moment.

'Oh, what if he should die?' the poor wife moaned anxiously, while the tears that had at first gushed out still continued to flow freely.—She then got camphor, and chafed his temples with it. She also washed his face with cold water, and tried various means to arouse him from the lethargy of drunkenness. But all to no purpose.

At last, despairing of success, she lay down beside him, still in tears, drew her arms around his neck and laid her face tenderly against his. She had lain thus for about five minutes, when her husband called her name in a whisper.

Oh, how eagerly did she listen after her response to his call.

'If my husband were to do so!' As he said this, still in a whisper, but a very expressive one, he looked her steadily in the face with a roguish twinkle of the eyes, and a quivering of his lips, the muscles of which he could with difficulty restrain from wreathing those expressive organs into a merry smile.

Mrs. Peters understood the whole scene in a moment, and boxed her husband's ears soundly on the spot, for very joy, while he laughed until his sides ached as bad as his ears.

In all after discussions upon the various unfortunate relations of man and wife, Mrs. Peters was very careful how she declared her course of action, were she placed in similar circumstances. If in any case she was led unthinkingly to do so, the remark of her husband, made with a peculiar inflection of the voice—

'Oh, yes! If my husband were to do so,' had the happiest effect imaginable, and instantly put an end to the unprofitable discussion.

ANECDOTE OF GENERAL PIERCE. Gen. Pierce recognizes The Union as his organ, and is democratic enough to evince his regard even by a midnight visit to the composing room, unheralded and unattended. It was the night after the receipt of the intelligence of the death of William R. King, that the President's proclamation relative thereto, and the respective orders issued by the proper officers of the army and navy, wers sent to the Union office for publication.—At midnight, after the editors had all left the establishment, a plain-looking gentlemen, with specs on his nose, walked into the composition room where a printer, by the uncommon name of Jones, was busily engaged in "making up;" "Is it too late to correct a little error?" said the stranger. Jones—"No, sir, not if it's in this form. What does it relate to?" Stranger—"The death of Mr King." Jones—"The official orders, sir? I have them just here,"—Stranger—"Well, just read my order over, and I will tell you what I wish changed." "My order," cogitated Jones; "I wonder which is his.. Which order did you say, sir?" Stranger "My order" Jones cast his eye up and down the long columns, then at his tormentor, but saw no clue to the troublesome "order." He repeated his question: "Which order did you wished to correct?" Stranger—(in a tone of peculiar and impressive eloquence)—"MY order.' Jones, still uninlightened, turned upon the interrogator with, "Well, if you will be good enough to tell me your name, I'll try to accommodate you." Stranger—(sententiously)—"Franklin Pierce." Poor Jones was "struck" just then, but he managed to make the required alteration in an incredibly short space of time and felt exceedingly relieved when he found himself alone again.

A CHALLENGE TO EUROPE. It appears from the following paragraph in the N. Y. Spirit of the Times that another American yacht is about to proceed to the British Channel, to test the comparative merit, in point of sailing, of the English and American yachts:

"The yacht Silvie, Capt. Comstock, sailed from Depau's Island, (Westchester county, N. Y., opposite New Rochelle,) on Saturday last, 11th inst., at 10 o'clock for Havre. She was built by George Steers, at the same time and alongside of the "America," and may be said to be her twin sister. Possibly there is no improvement on the model or rig of the America. Nous verrons! The Silvie is 105 tons, and her spirited owner, who is a young gentleman of family and fortune in this city, is willing to test her sailing qualities with anything in Europe (not excepting the renowned America), for any amount of money, or for the Honor of the American Flag! The 'Silvie,' from Havre, sails for Cowes. She carries a crew of eleven picked men, all Smack men of Long Island Sound, all young, handy and handsome, who 'know the ropes,' are 'up' to a 'Po'keepsie shake,' and 'don't lose anything when they break!' Louis Depau, Esq., her owner, sails for England in a few days, and will join her at Cowes. Our correspondents and subscribers in 'foreign parts' will look out for him as 'one of us!' The yachts of England or Russia may beat the 'Silvie,' but they cannot 'take down' her owner for enterprise, spirit, or hospitality. The best wishes of twenty millions of people are with him, and though he may not command success, he will deserve it!"

THE BLACKFOOT INDIANS. The St. Louis Republican of the 21th inst., has the following interesting intelligence in regard to the country of the Blackfoot Indians.

"We yesterday had a conversation with Mr. Harvey, who has just returned from the Falls of Missouri River, having spent the last winter among the Blackfoot Indians, trading and trapping. Mr. H. brings down with him a considerable amount of robes and peltries. He states that the season has been unusually good, especially for buffalo, and great numbers have been killed by the Indians. The distance from this city to the Falls of the Missouri River is about three thousand miles. The party came down in Mackinaw boats, and experienced no difficulty, performing the journey in an almost incredible short period, having left on the 18th April last. The snow in the mountains is not unusually large, but has not commenced to melt. He reports during the past winter a great deal of difficulty among the mountain tribes, war parties from among the Crows, Blackfoot, Flatheads, &c., were constantly going out in search of each other, and stealing horses: and taking scalps was the favorite winter pastime. He reports that nearly two thousand horses and about thirty scalps were brought in by various war parties of the Blackfoot tribe during the winter. From the best information we can gather, we are disposed to think this tribe the most dangerous and intractable in the mountains. They have no desire for peace, and are constantly committing depredations upon the neighboring tribes."

FOURTH OF JULY IN SPRINGFIELD. A novel feature is to be introduced into the procession at Springfield on the fourth. It is said that a cavalcade of young ladies and gentlemen will be formed, dressed in the old continental style, with cocked hats, broad flaps, tights, knee buckles, silk stockings, short waists, powdered hair, pillions, &c., &c.

Destructive Conflagration at Cambridgeport.

About three o'clock Sunday afternoon, fire broke out in the stable rear of the Cambridge Hotel, on Main street, a short distance from the bridge, and the wind blowing fresh from the north-west, drove the flames rapidly before it, destroying everything which came in their way. The tide was out at the time, and consequently much more difficulty was experienced in obtaining water than would have been the case under other circumstances. It was very soon evident that the firemen would have a hard battle to fight, as the flames were fast spreading in every direction, and the alarm was sounded in this city, whereupon several of our engines and hose carriages repaired to the scene of destruction.

Engines were also present from Chelsea, Charlestown, Somerville, Watertown, Waltham, West Cambridge, Brighton, Brookline and Roxbury, and rendered all the aid in their power.—The heat from the fire was so intense that although some of the city engines were promptly on the way thither, they were unable to cross the Cambridge end of the bridge, and for a long time the bridge was in great danger, but was fortunately saved with but a slight scorching, principally through the efforts of the firemen from this side.

The fire was the most destructive of any which has occured in Cambridge for a series of years. The firemen had a hard afternoon's work of it, and many suffered extremely from the great heat of the flames, which they battled right manfully.

The flames and smoke of the fire were seen in various parts of the city, and in many other places at a much greater distance, and drew together thousands of persons to witness the work of the destroying element.

The loss is estimated by persons considered as good judges in such mattes to be not less than $70,000, and there are some who estimate it at not less that $100,000. [Boston Journal.

From the Provinces.

We have received through Favor's and Gunnison's expresses, says the Boston Journal, late St John and Halifax papers.

Vice Admiral Seymour had arrived at St John, on business connected with the protection of the fisheries. He was received with military honors, and the Common Council voted to present him with an address in the name of the city, thanking him for his exertions last year to protect the colonial fisheries from foreign aggression. The 'New Brunswicker,' in speaking of the fishery troubles says:

'An impression is abroad that the operations of last year, and the leniency then exercised towards American vessels found trespassing in our waters, were intended as a warning; and that during the present season every vessel found fishing within the prohibited distance will be seized and confiscated. A schooner hired by Sir George Seymour has been manned and armed for the purpose of guarding the entrance of the Bay of Chaleur, between Point Miscou (the extreme north-eastern part of the Province) and Point Mackerel, on the gaspe shore, in order to prevent all intrusion on the waters of that Bay.

The steamer Rose, formerly mail packet between Charlottetown and Pictou, has also been hired and armed, to cruise on the north side of Prince Edward Island, and prevent trespasses there. Boat stations will probably be established at various points on the Gulf Coast, and these, with the ships of war and hired vessels will, we hope, this season effectually prevent the wanton intrusions upon our fishing grounds, of which Colonist have so long and justly complained."

H, M. S. Espigle and Vestal have sailed from Halifax for the fishing grounds.

A skiff from Witless Bay, bound to St Johns, N. F., 18th ult., when off Black Head, was overtaken by a heavy squall and instantly upset, when all on board, said to be nine men and three women were drowned.

The steamer Creole, a fine boat, running between St John and Windsor, ran ashore on Wednesday night last, about half a mile N. W. of Cape Enrage, and went to pieces. The crew and passengers were all saved.

The British ship Amazon, of Hull, Joseph Clark, master, bound from Shields to New York, with a cargo of coals, was wrecked on Sable Island, on the first inst. The 'Halifax Recorder' reports an outrage on the part of Americans, that we hope will prove unfounded, or at least, greatly exaggerated.

"The wreck of the Amazon was plundered on the night of the 5th inst., of sails, rigging, anchor, hawser, wheel, copper and other materials, by two American fishing schooners, the juvenile, Alonzo Rogers, of Plymouth, and Mary S. Hurd, Theophilus Hurd, of Chatham The Superintendant and his men took a boat and started in pursuit. They had a pretty long stern chase, before they overtook the robbers, and would have missed their purpose altogether, but for a calm coming on. Capt. Hurd immediately gave up the articles he had taken, but Rogers basely held on to his ill-gotten gains. A little time will show whether justice has hands long enough to reach the scoundrel."

A St John paper says that Lord Elgin, the Governor General, has accepted an invitation to be present at the New York Crystal Palace Exhibition.

Robert Wilson Fraser, Esq., the newly appointed United States Consul for the port of Halifax, displayed the "Star Spangled Banner" for the first time since his appointment, on the 10 inst.

The citizens of Charlottetown, P. E. I., held a meeting to petition Her Majesty not to withdraw the troops from the Island.

A St John paper says that the display on the part of New Brunswick, at the New York exhibition, will be meagre, in consequence of the "putting off" from time to time of the opening—many of the artists becoming discouraged and disposing of their works at good prices in St. John.

We learn by the Provincial papers, as well as by private accounts, that crops of all kinds are in a remarkably forward state. A gentleman who has recently travelled extensively in New Brunswick, informs us that the prospect of an abundant harvest never looked more promising than at present. Strawberries were picked at Birch Cove, Halifax, on the 4th inst.

MR. WEBSTER'S MEMORY. The 'New York Express' says a delicate compliment has been paid to the accomplished lady of the deceased statesmen, by some of his friends in that city. Wishing to testify their respect for Mr. Webster's memory and their regard for Mrs. Webster, who is a New York lady, they subscribed the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars as a present. They have tendered their liberal offering in the form of an elegant residence, handsomely furnished, or in an investment subject to her sole control, and for her sole benefit.

ROCKLAND GAZETTE.

The Athenæum Library.

We are happy to know that the condition of this Library is constantly improving. About one hundred and fifty volumes of excellent books have recently been added—most of them new works, and such as will be sought for by all who devote any of their time to reading. The Directors are taking special pains to keep the shelves of the Athenæum supplied with the best of the new works that are constantly coming from the press. Such a course continually pursued will make the Library what every public library ought to be, a place where the proper wants of all readers can be supplied.

The whole number of volumes now exceeds fourteen hundred. Among the new books we remember of having seen Webster's Works, Gile's Discourses on Life, Napoleon in Exile, Margaret Fuller, Goethe, 2 vols,—The successful Merchant, Green's Historical Studies, Poets, and Poetry of the Bible, Louis Napoleon, Popular Travels, 6 vols.—Heroines of History, and Freedly's Treatise on Business, which last work is most excellent for every man to read. A careful reading of this work is worth some years' experience in business.

☞ We notice by the papers that several of our neighboring towns are making arrangements to celebrate the coming Forth, among them Belfast Portland, Lewiston, and Gardiner. At the last mentioned place, the Rockland Brass Band will be present, and assist in making the occasion a pleasant one. We congratulate the people of that city, that they are to have such "eloquent music" discoursed, as our Band are always sure to give. Under the leadership of MR. J. COLLINS, they have justly earned the reputation of being one of the best bands in the State. Our citizens who have heard them in the streets during the delightful evenings which we have had during the last week, will not hesitate to make this acknowledgement.

We hear nothing said as to any kind of a "demonstration" in Rockland. Why shouldn't we "do something for our Country" on that day? It can certainly be from no want of patriotism! We don't like the custom of going out of town every fourth, for a "good time'

INTERESTING TO POSTMASTERS. In the quarterly adjustment of the books of the post office department, there is invariably an exhibit of many ballances apparently due late postmasters. These remain, not unfrequenty, for a long time uncalled for, by the persons respectfully who are entitled to them. By some means, not always the most honorable, a knowledge of these balances, with the names of the parties to whom they are due, has been obtained by shrewd and too often unscrupulous, agents, attorneys and others at Washington, who have availed themselves of the ignorance of the parties to extort from them extravagant fees for the performances of services merely nominal and always unnecessary. To obviate this evil, the Postmaster General, at the suggestion of Mr. Phillips, auditor of the department, has suspended, until further orders, all payments of credit balances due late postmasters, except such as are called for within nine months after they accrue, and by the party to whom due.—The postmaster general does not doubt that the accounts exhibiting such balances will be examined as speedily as circumstances will permit, and that the sums found to be due will be notified to the creditor porties, and paid over with all reasonable despatch.

NAVAL.—The U. S. ship Lexington, storeship to the Japan squadron, and freighted with presents for the Emperor of Japan, sailed from N York on Saturday, for Macao, China.

The Genoa correspondent of the 'Newark Daily Advertiser' communicates the following intelligence in regard to the Mediterranean squadron:

'The United States steam frigate San Jacinto, Capt. Crabbe, returned to this port on the 26th of May, from Alexadria, whither she went to carry Judge Jones, (of Pennsylvania) our new Consul General for Egypt, and departed for the United States on Saturday, the 28th inst—officers and crew all well. Her machinery works badly, and must undergo a thorough overhauling. Judge Jones was well received by Abbas-Pacha at Cairo.

The Cumberland, Com. Stringham's flag ship, had reached the Piræus, at the last dates from Greece, with Mr. Marsh, who had gone up to Athens with the ultimatum of the Washington Cabinet in the Dr. King affair. The indemnity demanded of the Greek Government for the injuries sustained by that gentleman, and the expenses resulting, I understand, amount to about $50,000. The corvette St. Louis, Capt. Ingraham, was daily expected at the Piæus from her cruise to Malta and Egypt.

The clipper John P. Kennedy sails from New York for the coast of Africa to day. day.

The offiers at the Brooklyn Navy Yard Capt. Hudson, Acting Commodore in absence of Commodore Boardman, and Capt. Peck of the receiving ship North Carolina, visited the British frigate Leander on Saturday morning. They were received on board by Capt. Ring and other officers, to whom Capt. Hudson tendered the usual courtesies.

Capt. James Deering, formerly Captain of the T. F. Secor, is soliciting suberiptions for a new steamer to run from Bangor to Machias, touching at the intervening landings on the Penobscot; and at Castine, Deer Isle, Sedgwick, Mt. Desert, &c. More than one third of the requsite sum is already obtained. The boat is intended to be completed in season to commence running early next spring. [Bangor Jeffersonian.

Prince Victor, son of the Grand Duke of Mecklenberg-Sterlitz, and said to be a cousin of Prince Albert, was landed at Campobello on Friday morning, by the British war-steamer Devastation, and proceeded from this place in the steamer Admiral, in the afternoon, for Boston and New York, perhaps on some official business. We learn that he is at present a Lieut. on board one of the war vessels at Halifax, probably the Admiral's ship. He is a very plain looking German, with plain dress and address, but bearing the marks of good sense and natural dignity. [Eastport Sentinel.

Cornelius Broomer, aged 37 years, son of a farmer in Clarkson, near Rochester, N. J., fell asleep on the 19th of June, 1848, and has slept most of the time since. For months together he has been unable to speak or move, but eats, and is healthy.

HOME OBSERVATIONS.

Walking Out.

We don't mean simply walking out of doors, but when you get out keep walking. This is the most beautiful month of the year in many respects. The grass and the foliage of the woods are in their perfect prime, with a freshness about them that July and August can no more equal than prim thirty and wrinkled forty can approach the lovely beauty of seventeen or thereabouts. Now the robin is heard from the birch-tree, now the bobolink is in his musical glory. But we have no idea of being poetical—the smoke of the lime-kilns, rising forever and ever, extinguishes that notion completely. But we would recommend to all, who are confined to their houses and shops overmuch, to go out now and then and enjoy the fine scenery. It is far better than sitting still, or even loafing round the street corners. In every direction back, and at both ends of the village, there are fine walks and cheering views of land and water. Why, if in some places they could have our scenery—our bay, our roads to the Meadows, our Dodge's Mountain and Owl's Head—you never would hear the last of it. The letter-writers would describe, the poets rhyme and the painters daub, till crowds would flock to the "charming spot." You would see enthusiastic gentlemen making speeches to themselves all over Owl's Head, and young ladies going into hysterics by the dozen on Dodge's elevated summit. Really, it is overwhelming to think of it,—so we again urge our people to make the most of these advantages. Walk in "the cool of the evening," like ancient Isaac, and meditate. You will feel refreshed, sleep will be sweeter, and you will rise better prepared for the labors of the day.

Good Dinners.

"The weakest part of an alligator is his stomach. Man is an alligator."

The above beautiful sentiment we observe going the rounds of the press, as it deserves to go for its rare truthfulness no less than its elegance of expression. But it is not on that account we quote it, but rather because it is susceptible of a fine personal application among us. We dropped into the new Commercial House the other day at dinner, and found that our alligatorial ('tis a new word, but can't help it) propensities were completely satisfied. The salmon was served up, in the first place, by Mr. MERRIL, in a style that we never saw excelled by any landlord in Maine,—and secondly, it was then carved up by the company with a thoroughness and taste that defy all comparison! If any one is skeptical on the point, let him step in some noon. Washing-days, rainy days, or when it is too hot to walk any distance, we advise our readers in the vicinity just to walk in leisurely when the gong rings, sit down and enjoy themselves. We know they will rise with good feelings towards mankind in general, and towards Mr. Merrill in particular.

Bishop Burgess.

This distinguished divine conducted the exercises at the Congregational church last Sunday. We heard him for the first time, and with great pleasure. Though suffering, we understood, from some neuralgic complaint, his sermons were of a very high order. Calm, lucid and sustained, he moves through his subject like a noble ship in smooth waters. Not like a man-of-war, for there is nothing belligerent in his disposition, but rather resembling one of our noble barks that went to the relief of starving Ireland, rich laden with the bread of life. Such preachers we like. They rely on the calm presentation of their cause, and exemplify in their lives all they teach in the pulpit. Among the Bishop's minor merits is his correct and beautiful elocution. No shouting, whining nor improper emphasis for the sake of effect, but all distinct and harmonious, and appropriate to the thought. Every way, we should think, he fulfils the apostle's description of a good bishop.

Growing.

How our village is growing! Not with a forced and hot-bed stimulation, but naturally and with an inherent vigor. Northward, southward, and towards the Meadows, a simultaneous expansion is going on. New lime kilns are lining the shore, and new dwelling houses are appearing in the "desert places" of a year past. It was not long ago that we put forth as a slim sprout from the old Thomaston trunk, and now the time has almost come when the village bud must burst out into a full-blown city. We can almost fancy the day when we shall cover the entire shore of the bay, and trade in the rich house lots of the Meadows. So mote it be.

CHIK A. WAUKIE, ESQ.

☞ We give the communication of "P" below, with the request that if he should have occasion to write again for our columns he will give us his name.

For the Rockland Gazette.

MR. EDITOR:—I am not a little surprised that some of the learned men of this place have not answered to the call through your columns some weeks since, to account or attempt to account for, or refute, the so called spiritual phenomena.

It is too late in the day for them to cry 'humbug,' for the battle has been fought and the victory declared in favor of the manifestations. Nor is it becoming in the scholar to say they are beneath his notice, for there is nothing in the whole realmns of science beneath his notice.—If he should say that the subject has no claims to science, then let him show this, so that the minds of us common people may be calmned.

This subject would not long continue to agitate the public mind if clergymen would meet and refute it, any more than Atheism. And it is a circumstance deeply to be regretted that clergymen have ever looked upon Atheism as beneath their notice, for had it been met and refuted, as it appears to me it might have been, and ought to have been, it would not have spread, even to the church itself, as it now has; so perhaps with Spiritualism. THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

BY H. P. KIMBALL.

They are coming! they are coming!
In the swift Industrial train,
From the Thule of the nations
And the islands of the Main,—
Freighted with their costly treasures;
From the anvil, wheel and loom.—
From the depths of mining caverns,
Where no sun dispels the gloom.

Labor, with her toiling nobles—
Sons of wealth and promise great,
Harbinger of peace and progress
In the empire and the state,
Hasten on the wings of commerce,
Borne by fav'ring tide and breeze,
To the land of right and suffrage
O'er the wide Atlantic seas.

Janus shuts her bloody portal
'Mong the great and rival powers;
Peace proclaims in song immortal
Joyful respite now is ours;
Nations shake the hand of welcome,
Joining in a nobler strife,
Aiming to be bloodless victors,
In the peaceful arts of life.

Science, robed in queenly honors,
Art, enthroned in regal state,
Sovereigns of the world's obeisance,
Claim the Earth their kingdom great
Deserts bloom in floral beauty,
Commerce whitens every sea,
Wisdom rears her gorgeous pillars,
Emblems proud of Liberty.

The glad, prophetic day is dawning,
Long foretold by ancient Seer;
When Amity shall guide the nations
In a proud and just career;
When swords to plowshares shall be beaten,
Battle spears to prunning-hooks;
And laws of love and duty written
On the soul as well as books.

Every triumph now of Labor,
Every miracle of Art,
Breaketh fetters from the conscience
Teacheth freedom to the heart.
Men are spurning vile restriction—
Laws which Nature never gave,
And they ask for clear conviction
That a man should be a slave.

Afric yet shall build her Palace,
Stored with bounties all her own,
Gathered from the central regions
Of her hot, untravelled zone.
Then will her dusky swarms in singing,
Shout their chorus o'er the sea;
On every breeze and billow bringing,
Tidings of their jubilee.

The gold discoveries on the Ouchita river, Arkansas, have created great excitement in that region. The Ouchita Herald says:

"New discoveries are constantly being made. Gold in small quantities has been found in the vallies, on the hill tops, and indeed almost everywhere where search has been made.—Scarcely a rock can be found thot does not contain some sign of gold. Some of the quartz rock has been found, which it is said will compare favorably with the California quartz. We saw a very fine specimen, a few days ago, of what is called the honey-comb quartz, which is always considered the best indication of rich diggings."

COKE FOR LOCOMOTIVES.—We have already stated that coke fuel has been introduced upon the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad with good success. We learn from a detailed account of the experiment, published in the Cumberland (Md) Journal, that the coke is from the Cumberland coal. Already has it been used to carry passenger trains over the heavy grades of the Allegany mountains, at a speed of 17 miles per hour, and with a pressure of 95 lbs. per square inch. And on the Washington branch its success has been still more striking. There, a speed of 45 miles per hour, has been attained, with a pressure of over 130 lbs to the square inch, thus rendering it necessary to permit a constant escape of steam. The saving in the use of coke, it is said, will not be less than one third, and it is thought will amount to one half, The Journal says:

"And here the question arises: if the saving in the use of coke in this region, where wood is comparatively abundant and cheap, is one third, what will it be in the east, where wood can only be had at high prices? The answer is plain. The adoption of coke as a fuel for locomotives in this region will be immediately followed by its introduction on all the eastern railroads. The managers of those roads will not only find it to their advantage as a cheaper fuel, but they will also find that where it is used there will be no sparks, smoke or cinders.—Thus there will spring up at once an immense demand for it, which can only be supplied from the Cumberland region, as there is no coal in this country, except ours, which will produce the proper quality of coke."

STAWBERRIES. Those who are most familiar with the markets, say that strawberry's were never so abundant, fine and cheap at this season. It is estimated that at least two and a half million baskets will be consumed in this city during the five or six weeks of strawberry time. There are about 30 wholesale strawberry dealers in Washington market alone. The making of the baskets employs hundreds of persons. They are made of chip and are worth 6 cents a dozen. The amount of strawberries sold in this city last year is estimated at $120,000. This season the sum will reach much higher, as every body is indulging to the full. The milk and sugar consumed with the berries would make a respectable sweetened ocean. [N. York Mirror.

THE PORTLAND GENIUS is a spicy weekly paper, edited by JOSIAH LORD THOMAS. The following description of Fort Preble is said to be in the editor's happiest vein:

No one can look without emotion at those solid battlements built after the Egyptian style of architecture, of the thickest and strongest turf, and frowning in sullen majesty at the fishing boats beneath; while they have up-borne the noble flag of our country through a thousand storms, some of which were severe enough to shake the flag-staff to the very centre. The officers are very brave and polite gentlemen, who have all fought bled and died for their country a great many times, especially in the Aroostook war, as I have been informed. I understand that the artillery-men have acquired such skill and dexterity in the use of their guns, that they keep the market continually supplied with ducks and fresh fish.

The Hancock County jail has been to "to let," for a month past.

'LITTELL'S LIVING AGE', No 474. This number of Littell is of more than ordinary interest. The leading article, taken from the British Quarterly Review, is upon Madame Guyon, the celebrated religious teacher of the seventeenth century in France. It is a review of Prof. Upham's life of the lady, and gives an extended examination of her principals. It abounds, besides, in spirited notices of Fenelon Bossuet and Louis XIV. We have not read for a long time an article evincing so much learning and graceful, yet vigerous rhetoric. The Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin is also noticed in a discriminating spirit. Lady Lee's Widowhood is continued with unflagging interest. The Kingdom of Reconciled Impossibilities is an amusing description of the tricks which are played upon us in the realm of slumber. It is worth reading Coal Mine explosions contains much useful information. In the way of literary reviews, we have a critical estimate of Richard Henry Dana and an obiturary notice of Ludwig Tieck, the German, Poet — both interesting. There is also the usual amount of good poetry and short articles. In fact, Littell is up with the times, if not uppermost among his current publications.

ROBBERY. Last fall, the store of Mr. Fisher, in Biddeford, in this State, was robbed of $1000 in goods, and again on Saturday last it was robbed of goods to the amount of $800. The 'Haverhill Gazette' says that about $400 worth of goods stolen last fall were found a day or two since in the possession of Greenleaf Lull, in that town, and that he was arrested and taken to Newburyport. He asserts that he received the goods from his brother in Biddeford.

THE CROPS. The 'Vicksburg (Miss) Whig' of the 7th inst. says: 'There being an unusually large number of planters in attendance upon Court on yesterday, we took occasion to inquire as to prospect of the crops and we were gratified to learn that notwithstanding the lateness of the spring, the cotten crop promises remarkably well, and also the corn crop. A few weeks since, the planters in this vicinity were depressed by the ppearance of the crops, and the state of the weather.'

The 'Louisville Journal' of the 11th says:

'We understand that the farmers in this vicinity commenced cutting their wheat on Friday. The grain is large and full, and of the finest quality.'

The Corporation of Montreal have resolved to increase the police force of that city to the number of one hundred men, four sergeants, two sub-chiefs and one captain; the force to be accoutred with muskets and bayonets whenever necessary to preserve the public peace.

At Nobleboro and at Damariscotta Mills a great revival is in progress. Fifty-three have been baptized at the former place. At Windsor twelve have been received into the church by baptism. At Nobleboro and at Paris the same work is going forward. These revivals are among the Baptists and Methodists.

FROM NASSAU. Dates from New Providence, Nassau, to the 28th ult, have been received.—The 'Royal Gazette' learns that a slaver has been recently captured near Key Sal, by H. M.'s ship. The weather at Inagua, Crooked Island, &c., continued to be favorable to the salt rakers and to hold out fine prospects for them.

We have never seen any man at a public dinner, who could display more wit and ready humor than Ex-mayor Quincy of Boston. Recently, at the Tom Moore dinner, he remarked, that although he had never been in Cork, he had seen so many drawings of it that evening that he felt himself almost an Irishman.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION. The State Central Committee have called a State Convention of the "Friends of Temperance and the Maine Law to meet in the City Hall at Portland on Wednesday and Thursday, the 6th and 7th of July.' 'The Convention,' says the call, 'will be a Mass Meeting, and delegates from all the Towns, Plantations and Temperance Associations will be welcomed and invited to participate in the Meeting."

SHIP BUILDING EXTRAORDINARY.—Mr. F. Hanaford is now building a schooner of 125 tons burden, on his farm at Cape Elizabeth, more than a mile from the shore. She is set on shoes, and when finished, which will not be till next winter, is to be hauled by oxen to the shore.—Mr. H. has built two or three vessels in this way, but we doubt if any one but a Yankee would have conceived of such a project.—Port Adv.

The Turks, on the other hand, were not idle, and were preparing for a vigorous resistance. The Egyptian fleet and an army of 30,000 men were proceeding to the support of the Sultan, whilst the Turcoman Chiefs were raising 100,000 men, free of expense to the Porte, for the defence of Islamism; nevertheless, it was believed that peace would be maintained. The meditation of Austria and Prussia was spoken of.

WEAKNESS OF THE LIMBS AND GENERAL DEBILITY CURED BY USING OXYGENATED BITTERS.

BOSTON February 13, 1850.

Messers. Stimpson & Reed,

During the winter of 1848-9, Mrs. Stiles suffered much from palpitation of the heart, weaness in the limbs, and general debility. She consulted an eminent physician in the city, without obtaining relief. On return of summer, she left home to visit her friends, with the hope of recovering her health; but neither the change of air, nor the medical advice she obtained while absent, gave her relief, and she returned after an absence of three months, without relief, and almost without hope. At this period, she was advised to use the Oxygenated Bitters, and obtained a bottle from you. Before useing it, she could not walk the shortest distance without exhaustion. After useing the Bitters a week, she walked from the Chelsea Ferry to Henry Pettes' store, on Washington Street, back again, without inconvenience. She has used three bottles, and has no hesitation in saying it is the only medicene that has afforded her relief.

Respectfully,
JOHN STILES.

Have been cured by this preparation within the past year.

20,000 Bottles Sold by one Agent in New York in Six Months!

One Agent writes from Western New York—"Send me One Hundred Dozen "Sure Relief, or Universal Pain Killer" as soon as possible, as I am all out. It is the most wonderful Pain Killer in the world. It is used by our best Physicians."

Another Agent writes, "Your Pain Killer has cured some of the worst cases of Rheumatism in this place; it is truly a Wonderful Medicine. Please send me two gross more by express."

A patient writes, I have used all the Pain Killers of the day, but find none so worthy the title of Pain Killer as yours. It is all it is recommended to be—a Sure Relief for Pain.

Another writes, "the Physicians' Sure Relief or Pain Killer, is the best Medicine in the world for Rheumatism; it has effected a cure upon myself which baffled the skill of our best Physicians. Hundreds of such statements as the above might be adduced—One trial will convince the most skeptical.

Two applications have cured the most severe Rheumatic pains.
One application has cured the most violent Cramp in the limbs.
Thirty drops has relieved pain in the stomach.
Six applications have entirely cured Rheumatism.
Twenty-five drops taken every twenty minutes has cured Cramps, Spasms, &c.
One application at bed time has cured Sore Throat.
Twenty drops taken every fifteen minutes has cured Bilious Cholic
One application has cured Stiches in the Back
One drop has often cured the most severe Toothache
Fifteen drops taken every fifteen or twenty minutes will cure Dysentery and Diarrhea.
Twenty-five drops has cured Sick Headache.
Ten drops has often relieved Acid Stomach.
Three applications has cured Lame Side.
Twenty-five drops will in all cases cure Wind on the Stomach.
Ten drops every fifteen minutes will cure Cholera Morbus.
Three applications has cured Lumbago.
Thirty drops daily has cured Gravel and Kidney complaints.
Sudden Colds and hard Coughs can be cured by a few doses, as thousands can testify.
For Kidney complaints the Sure Relief is an excellent remedy, taken two or three times a day.
For Spinal difficulties it is invaluable. One teaspoonful will relieve the most violent pain in the Stomach, and restore it to its natural feeling. When taken according to directions, it will speedily and effectually cure Bowel complaints, and that horrible disease, the Cholera, as has been proved in innumerable cases in New Orleans, St. Louis, Cincinnati, and many other large cities in the South and West, where the Diarrhea and Cholera have raged so fatally. Reader, if you are suffering from either of the diseases named above, or from pain from any cause, be sure and try this great Relief and you will be well.

DR. WEAVER'S
CANKER & SALT RHEUM
SYRUP
CANKER CURE & CERATE, WARRANTED A CURE FOR
Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Scrofulous Humors, Liver Complaints, Canker, and all Diseases arising from Impure Blood.

THESE preparations are scientific production of a regular educated physician (who is now extensively engaged in the practice of his profession.) They have become deservedly popular in all sections of the country, where they have been introduced, from the fact that they never failed to effect a cure where they have been used according to directions.

THE CANKER AND SALT RHEUM SYRUP

is an article differing entirely from Sarsaparilla or Dock Syrups, or any other preparation ever offered to the public. It can be positively relied on for the effectual cure of all SCROFULOUS HUMORS, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, CANKER in the Mouth, Stomach or Bowels, Female Weaknesses, and all humors arising from an impure state of the blood.—In a word is a complete renovator, eradicating disease and restoring to healthy action every part of the system.

THE CERATE

in all cases of humors, and especially for SALT RHEUM and ERYSIPELAS, is a valuable accompaniment to the Syrup, as it will effectually destroy every vestige of Humor from the surface of the body which will be driven out by the use of the Syrup. It is one of the most valuable external applications ever known for Burns, Scalds, Scald Head, Old Sores, Piles, Barber's Itch and all other eruptions on the skin. And air surpasses all other external applications.

THE CANKER CURE

is the DESIDERATUM so long sought for the RELIEF and CURE of certain diseases which all other preparations have failed to relieve. It is warrented a positive cure for Nursing Sore Mouths, in these cases it has never failed. Thousands have tried it, and been cured; also for Canker in the mouth, Stomach and Bowels, and obstinate Dysentery it has effected cures after all other tried remedies had failed. For Ulcers and all diseases proceeding from cankerous humors in the system this is useful and is a valuable accompaniment to the Syrup in all cases of Canker.

N. B. Neither of the above articles are genuine without the signature of S. A. WEAVER & Co. on the outside wrapper.

Manufactured at New London, Conn., by S. A. WEAVER & Co, to whom all orders must be addressed.

GREAT SPRING AND SUMMER MEDICINE.
Only 25 cents for a Pint Bottle and 37 1-2 cents for a Quart Bottle of PEOPLE'S MEDICINE.
DR. LANGLEY'S
SARSAPARILLA, YELLOW DOCK, WILD CHERRY, Prickly Ash, Dandelion, Thoroughwort and Rhubarb, ROOT AND HERB BITTERS,
Decidedly the greatest Medicine in the world for the money
'BUY ME AND I'LL DO YOU GOOD'

THIS invaluable compound has now been before the public three years, during which time nearly three hundred thousand Bottles have been used: thus proving it the most popular Medicine of the age. No poisonous drugs or minerals, such as Opium, Antimony, or Mercury, under any of their hydra-headed, kill-all forms, compose any part of these Bitters. The medicinal virtues of the best Roots, Herbs, and Barks in the world are so compounded as to act in consort with nature. They cure and eradicate from the system Liver Complaint,—that main wheel of so many diseases,—Jaundice, Bile, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Humors of the blood and skin, Indigestion, Nervous Headache, Piles, General Debility, and the host of kindred diseases arising from a disordered stomach, or bad humory blood. On the approach of warm weather most persons are troubled with Langour, Drowsiness, and general lassitude of the system. This, if neglected, leads to Jaundice, loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Debility and Decline. Langley's Bitters are just the thing to obviate all difficulties of the kind. They regulate the bowels, stimulate the circulation, purify the blood, and by a constant use, keep off disease so common in Spring and Summer. Coughs and Colds, are by its use, broken up and cured at once. In short, this Medicine is safe for all ages and conditions, and in all climates. It always does good and never does hurt. No lying certificates—no flaming handbills or costly wrappers, are used to puff it into notice. All who try them will say, as more than 200,000 persons can testify, that one Bottle will do them more good than forty Latin prescriptions of poisonous drugs, by which so many people are anually killed.

The effect of this Medicine upon the system is most wonderful. Its healing, cleansing and purifying qualities operate with magic-like power upon all classes of diseases for which they are recommended. All who use them like them, becase they are what they profess to be.

Sold in Rockland by JOHN WAKEFIELD, wholesale and retail. Also sold by all the dealers in medicine in Rockland and Camden, whole depot is 97, Union St. Boston.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, COUGH
ASTHMA BRONCHITIS, GENERAL DEBILITY,
AND ALL SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

THE Proprietor has succeeded (from directions of Professor Stone) in combining the Oil and lime so perfectly that the taste of the Oil, which is so nauceous to persons generally, is entirely overcome, and it can be taken by the most delicate females with pleasure. and as regards the benefit of this article over the clear oil, the following case, by Prof. Stone, is sufficient to convince the most skeptical. The young lady was 24 years of age.

"Her disease was one of unmixed phthisis, which had been expected to terminate in the course of a few months, fatally. The upper part of both her lungs was filled with tubercles; and in some places were beginning to soften. The case was evidently a bad one. The treatment of Cod Liver Oil was at first used, but without any marked improvement. The phosphate of lime was then administered with the oil, and the result as in the case of many others, was soon apparent—the patient was rapidly getting well"

Caution. On account of the great reputation of this Compound for all Lung complaints, the subscriber would caution the afflicted against using any except that manufactured by him, as he has the only recipe in the United States for combining the Pure Oil with Lime in a proper manner. Therefore as you value your health, purchase none except that manufactured by

HERE IS YOUR REMEDY

HOLLOWAYS OINTMENT.
A MOST MIRACULOUS CURE OF BAD LEGS, AFTER 43 YEARS' SUFFERING.

Extract of a Letter from Mr. William Galpin, of 70, Saint Mary's Street, Weymouth, dated May 15th, 1851.

To Professor HOLLOWAY,

SIR:—At the age of 18 my wife (who is now 61) cought a violent cold, which settled in her legs, and ever since that time they have been more or less sore, and greatly inflamed. Her agonies were distracting, and for months together she was deprived entirely of rest and sleep. Every remedy that medical men advised was tried, but without effect; her health sufferd severely, and the state of her legs was terrible. I had often read your advertisements, and advised her to try your Pills and Ointment; and, as a last resours, after every other remedy had proved useless, she consented to do so. She commenced six weeks ago, and strange to relate, is now in good health. Her legs are painless, without seam or scar, and her sleep sound and undisturbed. Could you have witness the sufferings of my wife during the last 43 years, and contrast them with her present enjoyment of health, you would indeed feel delighted in having been the means of so greatly alleviating the sufferings of a fellow creature.

(Signed) WILLIAM GALPIN.

A PERSON 70 YEARS OF AGE CURED OF A BAD LEG OF 30 YEARS' STANDING.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. Wm. Abbs. Builder of Gas Ovens, of Rushcliffe, near Huddersfield, dated May 31st. 1852.

To PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

SIR:—I suffered for a period of thirty years from a bad leg, the result of two or three different accidents at Gas Works; accompanied by scorbutic symptoms. I had recourse to a variety of medical advice, without deriving any benefit, and was even told that the leg must be amputated, yet, in opposition to that opinion, your pills and ointment have affected a complete cure in so short a time, that few who had not witnessed it would credit the fact.

(Signed) WILLIAM ABBS.

The truth of this statement can be verrified by Mr W. P. England, Chemist, 13 Market St., Huddersfield.

A DREADFUL BAD BREAST CURED IN ONE MONTH.

Extract of a letter from Mr Frederick Turner of Penhurst, Kent, dated December 0,513th18.

To PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY:

DEAR SIR:—My wife had suffered from bad Breasts for more than six months, and during the whole period had the best medical attendance but all to no use. Having before healed an awful wound in my own leg by your unrivalled medicine, I determined again to use your Pills and Ointment, and therefore gave them a trial in her case, and fortunate it was I did so, for in less than a month a perfect cure was effected, and the benefit that various other branches of my family have received from their use is really astonishing; I now strongly recommend them to all my friends
